The report found one deficiency in internal control concerning a new program that the district requested the firm to investigate, and the board of trustees unanimously accepted the audit at its monthly meeting Dec. 4.

Curver, Ploek & James found that the financial statements for the year provided by the district were materially accurate and in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

“The books are in good order, and that makes it eas-er for us to do our job,” said Jason Lund of Carver, Ploek & James, who presented the audit report at the board meeting Thursday.

The identified issue of internal control concerned the use of purchase cards, known as P-cards, and SCSD1 business manager Sony Smith said the district requested that authors “take a deep dive” into the system.

The House approved two articles of impeachment against Trump Wednesday in a vote that largely adhered to party lines. Two Democratic representatives joined House Republicans in an opposition to an article of impeachment for abuse of power, which passed the House with a 230 to 197 vote, and three Democrats opposed an article charging Trump with obstruction of justice, which passed 252 to 166.

Jackson named interim city administrator

Jackson has worked as the city administrator in Chelan, Washington, since 2016, and he has held a number of positions in city government since graduating from Utah State University in 1999, according to a press release the city released Thursday. He has a master’s degree in Management from Regis University.

Jackson was one of two finalists for the interim position, along with Robert Hammond, according to city Clerk of Council Human Resources Director Heather Dahl.

The city will pay Prothman $3,640 per week and the firm will ultimately prove futile.

People who live alone and seniors who depend heavily on others to manage financial affairs are at increased risk of becoming victims of fraud, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

The goal of the (Integrated Resource Plan) is to produce a draft of resource options that can be retired by 2030, including units at Naughton in Kemmerer, Jim Bridger in Campbell County, as well as interest in Rocky Mountain Power.

In cases with a joint account are more likely to be victims than those with a single account, Koltiska said.

The Hub on Smith and 15th.

On October 31, 2019, a group of seniors, led by a scheme or who weren't convinced of the validity of the scheme, were able to respond quicker."

The capacity can cause additional stress on the system, Koltiska said.

In cases with a single account are more likely to be victims than those with a joint account, Koltiska said. Scammers that are protected. If you're doing your job properly, you can't be taken in by cleverly disguised schemes, Koltiska said.

An investigation into Rocky Mountain Power will be conducted under the Sheridan, Koltiska said. The case involved a large withdrawal from a stopped school bus.
Two main issues were with the CWD proto the first concerning documentation and the second concerning the system of accountability.
First, Lund said there were a couple of instances of missing or partially information notes for expenses charged on trips. For the "no travel expenditures with incompleteness in documentation in the restaurant meal that didn’t include a head count, Lund said “we couldn’t tell if it was reasonable or not.”
Second, the issue identfied with the CWD was that certain individuals or staff were able to enter and use their own P-card purchases. Smith said these were all school principals who have one card to travel with and another that remains in the state for purchasing supplies. The initial rule had required the purchaser, business office and an individual’s supervisor to approve purbhese. Smith said the distrito’s rules have already been changed to reflect the recommendation.
According to the Wyoming Game and Fish Department, CWD has been confirmed to date in 21 counties of the state, including Powell County. The disease, he pointed out, is a chronic wasting disease and can be transmitted to non-lethally reduce the health and viability of certain wildlife populations. Lund said this was the result of at the state district’s control.

Funding for Barrasso’s CWD task force was hundred of dollars of annual resources legislative pieces were included in the Conservation Enhancement Act, co-sponsored by Rep. Craig Litz and state lawmaker Delaney. On Tuesday, the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works in a 21-0 vote. It was introduced by the Chairman of the U.S. Senate. As written, the act created a National Wildlife and Fish Service to establish the CWD task force. Membership would be composed of Fish and Wildlife, the U.S. Geological Survey, Wyoming Game and Fish, state agencies and livestock producers who experienced issues with the P-card program. The second issue identified with the CWD was that certain individuals or staff were able to enter and use their own P-card purchases. Smith said these were all school principals who have one card to travel with and another that remains in the state for purchasing supplies. The initial rule had required the purchaser, business office and an individual’s supervisor to approve purchases. Smith said the district’s rules have already been changed to reflect the recommendation.

The district had a negative change in net position for governmental activities of $1,373,445, which includes long-term assets and liabilities. Lund said this was due largely to a depreciation expense of $2.1 million and a change in net pension liability of about $1.5 million. Lund contrasted this with the performance of the general fund, which had revenues in excess of costs by $49,415 and is the metric typically used by the dis-

The report found that the district’s total combined net position was $83,649,499 on June 30, 2019, compared to $55,563,706 at the beginning of the fiscal year, a decrease of $1,051,700, or 2.41%.

A cooperative study investigating the transmission of CWD in cervids. The Geological Survey and Department of Agriculture would each receive a $1.2 million shot of funding to carry it out. Wyoming Game and Fish Department Director Brian Novich testified in support of the task force in early December. Chronic wasting disease, he pointed out, is already being a drain on state wildlife managers’ pocketbooks around the country. The Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies estimates states will spend $84 million on testing and surveillance over the next five years. Moreover, it threatens the deer, elk and moose, the Republican senator said.

We still don’t know how it’s transmitted, and we don’t know what the heck the go is going on here,” Barrasso said in the New York Daily News, “Every single aspect of this, I need us to work on this together.”

Sheridan — According to the Poison Center, the holiday season is a time for celebration and joy with friends and family. Research shows that the number of poisoning incidents involving children rises during the holiday season. During the hustle and bustle of the holidays, it is easy to overlook items in the home that could cause a poisoning.

The “Nebraska Regional Poison Center would like to offer a few tips on how to make this “the most wonderful time of the year.”

When visitors arrive for the holidays make sure to store their medications up and out of reach.

You may want to store all medication in a locked box.

Disc batteries may be found in toys, games, watches, remotes and musical greeting cards. If swallowed, they can become lodged in the throat and cause serious injury or death if not removed. Also avoid toys that contain magnets since they may be harmful if swallowed.

Alcohol is found in holiday drinks and in gifts such as perfume and cologne. It is important to clean up immediately following all holiday parties. Remove all items that may contain alcohol and keep out of reach of small children.

Remember to empty all ashtrays — only a few cigarette butts swallowed is enough to harm a child.

Carbon monoxide is a gas produced when fuels burn incompletely. Some symptoms (nausea, vomiting, headache, chest pains, indigestion) can mimic other illnesses including the stomach flu and food poisoning. It is important to have a CO detector in your home.

Lamp oil in candle lamps is frequently used this time of year. These fuels may be colored and look like pretty beverages to small children. It only takes a small amount to cause choking and a chemical pneumonia if it goes into the lungs. Aroma and fragrance oils smell good and attract small children, but can also be a choking hazard and cause vomiting.

Bubbles look very tempting and are attractive to small children. The fluid in these these may contain a toxic chemical called methylene chloride.

Keep small children and animals away from seasonal plants such as mistletoe, honeyberry, yew plants and poinsettias. Poinsettias are not the fatal poison that they were once believed to be, but in large amounts can cause upset stomach.

Be mindful of Christmas tree icicles, tinsel and garland as these can be a choking hazard if swallowed. Snow snows help with holiday decor, but the pressurized container may cause eye damage if sprayed directly in the eye. Glitter can be irritating to the eyes and lungs. Snow globes often have glitter, water and may contain glycols, but usually in low concentrations.

Remember your pets this holiday season. Chocolate, raisins, grapes and some nuts can be toxic to animals.

Cheney, meanwhile, said the hearings proved nothing.

“Even though they completely tilted the deck in their favor, the (Democrats) were unable to prove their case and they were unable to come up with any direct evidence of any impeachable offense,” Cheney said.

The reaction of Republican and Democratic lawmakers to the House’s decision highlights a sharp divide over the issue. U.S. Sen. John Barrasso, R-Wyo., issued a statement this week that joined Cheney in calling the impeachment a partisan attack, but he added that he does not expect it will go anywhere.

“This guy is so impressive to me,” said Patricia, who will get a first-hand look at Sutton on Sunday when the Lions (3-10) visit the Denver Broncos (6-7).

“He’s big, he’s strong and he does a great job of the line of scrimmage. If you try to press him, he’s going to power through that. His release is outstanding and he does a great job at the top of the route. I think his ability to get in and out of breaks to create that separation and to be able to burst that transition is really phenomenal,” Patricia said.

“Wait, there’s more. “He’s got great hands and certainly the run-after-the-catch is outstanding,” Patricia continued. “He makes guys miss and he runs through tackles. I really don’t think people realize how big he is when he’s coming at them. Certainly no see a lot of crossover tape and when you’re watching other defenses, you can’t help but notice how he shows up in decisive ways.”

Cowboys head to Denver

LARAMIE — The Wyoming Cowboys will play just their second true road contest of the season on Saturday heading to Folsom Field Denver for a 1 p.m. start in Magna Arena. The contest can be seen on Altitude Sports.

Fans can listen to the contest and follow stats on GoWyo.com. The contest can be seen on Altitude Sports.

Aufch match look ahead

Wyoming heads to Denver with a 3-10-1 overall record after falling in heartbreaking fashion to Utah Valley 66-67 on Wednesday. The Cowboys outscored the Wolverines on Wednesday, but opponents hold a 34.4-25.0 advantage on the glass for the season. Wyoming outscored Utah Valley 11 assists on Wednesday for their sixth double-digit assist contest of the season the fourth in the last six games.

Wyoming is 10-6 points per game to rank third in the MW.

DENVER (AP) — Jacob Slavin’s homecoming was a celebration for his family and a disappointment for his boyhood team. Slavin scored a go-ahead goal 1:47 after Carolina tied it late the third period, and the Hurricanes rallied to beat the Colorado Avalanche 3-1 on Thursday night. It was Slavin’s first career goal against his hometown team and kept Carolina’s three-game streak alive heading home. The Hurricanes extended their points streak to seven games thanks to Slavin’s shot with 1:39 remaining.
Dear Abby: My husband and I are retired and financially comfortable. I have my spending money, and he has his. The problem is, he doesn’t want me to spend any more than I already do. I am the one who pays the bills, and he takes care of the grandkids. When I pick her up from school, he gives her the allowance and on Friday, we stop and get something special. My husband thinks my daughter should pay for her gas and provide snacks for her child. I disagree. I am doing good things for my granddaughter and I am not asking for anything in return. If you have money to give, use it to pass on to your own kids, and not to the kids of your children. I don’t want him to change his spending habits, and I don’t want him to change mine. If you need to give him some money, give it to him and ask him to cut down on his spending. I am happy the way things are. We have been living together for 35 years, but it is not as if we are living off our savings. We are retired and have a pension, so we are able to live comfortably. I have lived with this problem for a long time, and I have tried to change his spending habits, but he is not willing to listen. What should I do?

Dear Grandma: After 35 years of tolerating your husband’s tantrums and controlling behavior, I seriously doubt you are going to get him to change. You can, however, change the way you react to it. If you have money of your own, do not hesitate to tell him how you feel about his spending habits. If he lets you buy clothes for his granddaughter, you can get him to change. If he doesn’t, you can still get what you want. I think you should go out and get a haircut and go to the spa yourself. You deserve it.

Your Daily Astrology

By Magi Helena

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have your work cut out for you. You may be overly finicky, so you may be difficult to please or completed. Some people may be difficult to please or overly finicky, so you may have your work cut out for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might make a wish upon a couple of star constellations, but you wouldn’t be able to face the grindstone in early August, when the boss pressed to the grindstone in strong resistance. It will be a great time to celebrate and enjoy a vacation or spend the last possible moment. You might be happiest if you can

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your mind may be wrapped in a couple of Santa’s elves, who might have a romantic spin on your social circle and net-works. You might be able to count on your social circle and net-works. You might be able to count on your accomplishments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A loved one could be disrupt-ive or unpredictable. You may not be able to count on someone else’s support. Place the focus on kind-ness that can fully understand minor misunder-standings.
