SHERIDAN — A pot of $400,000 sits available for developers through the Sheridan County Commission for affordable housing projects. Four developers presented their projects to the community Wednesday evening, most having run the numbers according to if the project received full funding.

"I think that was one of the more interesting questions," said Vicki Swenson, who asked all four presenters if they could provide affordable housing to Sheridan County communities.

"If they were to use incentives just to say, ‘Hey if you’ve got 20 building sites,’ — and all of those are great — would you make it work if the county gave you guys $15,000, $16,000 per building site?" Westkott asked.

A FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT REQUEST TO THE FBI

"This is not because two kids are having fistfights, this is not because of an argument in a lunch room, this is that one horrid moment that we all dread," Remnick said. "That’s what the training would be for."

He said de-escalation techniques would be involved in training scenarios. And the phys ed evaluations are the same as those given to applicants for the police that’s designed to discover a person’s tendencies and not simply a pass or fail test.

"We will be in further consultation with the sheriff and the other agencies involved in the investigation and will begin reviewing all investigatory materials and evidence," Administrator Bryan Lockerby said in a statement Jan. 29. "One of our primary roles in a tragic incident like this is to help provide an external professional perspective for the lead law enforcement agency. The results of our review often assist local investigators in making their ongoing investigations and provide direction for a future course of action."

Big Horn County Undersheriff Eric Winburn said the missing person component of the case and investigation into Not Afraid’s death is considered one of the primary activities. The BHSO isn’t releasing any new details at this time.

Once the BHSO speaks with the family and Montana DCI has completed its review of the case, they will put out an official statement, Winburn said Wednesday.

FBI involvement

Sandra Yi Barke, Public Affairs Specialist with the FBI Salt Lake City Division, said the BHSO was the lead investigating agency in the search for Not Afraid but the FBI began assisting as soon as Not Afraid was reported missing Jan. 1. The BHSO requested the Child Abduction Rapid Deployment team and it was immediately deployed, Barker said in an email to The Sheridan Press.

The FBI office in Billings is a satellite office of the Salt Lake City Division. According to the FBI website, about 150 agents in the FBI field offices work full time on “Indian Country matters.”

The search for Not Afraid is one of FBI CARD team deployments since 2000, involving about 180 victims. The team has a 95% success rate for recovering missing children both alive and deceased, and “provides investigative, technical and resources assistance to state and local law enforcement during the critical time period following that abduction or mysterious disappearances,” Barker said. The FBI is responsible for investigating federal crimes including murder, child sexual and physical abuse, violence, drugs, and human trafficking.

Not guilty: Senate acquits Trump of impeachment charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump was acquitted of two impeachment charges, ending the most tumultuous 2020 election as a legal and political stalemate.

A majority of senators voted not guilty on both articles of impeachment, which were brought by the House, consisting of abuse of power and obstruction of Congress.

The president was acquitted on both counts, with 52 Republicans and 48 Democrats in the Senate voting to acquit. A simple majority is required to convict.

The outcome Wednesday was a stunning reversal for the Democratic Party, which had been on the cusp of impeaching Trump for months. It was a rebuke of Democratic leaders and the House, which impeached Trump in December.

The Senate initially declared the president not guilty on both charges, with the vote of 52-48. On the second article, obstruction of Congress, the vote was 50-50.

The acquittal came after a three-week trial that was the first in U.S. history with no witnesses. Seventeen Republicans joined with Democrats to vote for acquittal.

Kirk Douglas, longtime influential movie star, dies at 103

Kirk Douglas, the intense, muscular actor with the clipped, clipped voice who starred in “ Spartacus,” “ Lust for Life” and dozens of other films, died Tuesday afternoon at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles. He was 103.

Douglas, born Issur Danielovitch in 1916 in Amsterdam, N.Y., grew up in the New York City slums of the Lower East Side and made a fortune in the entertainment industry itself.

Douglas was a category unto himself, always competitive, including endurance. He was a force for change and symbol of justice, whose commitment to justice ended in a more diverse, decentralized era that he helped bring us. His influence is one of the most celebrated in the industry itself.

Westcott prefaced the question by saying that the infrastructure lawsuits against two developers — Jane Clark and Phyllis Fleming and Partners; Dave Randall of Norwood Development, LLC, said he’s not used to having the coffers to fund the last of the project funds. The money provided in these affordable housing funds is meant to cut down construction costs and eventual- ly buyer costs.

County Administrative Director Renee Obermueller said local officials are going to give to a developer simply because we can continue to have a perpetual fund.

“We’ve taken the $2 million initial funds and we’ve turned them over, this will be the third time,” Obermueller said. “There is merit in adding some type of contingency plan to the money that we’re going to give to a developer simply because we can continue to have a perpetual program.”

Obermueller said that aspect of the funding will be of interest and before that commissioners will decide whether to fund the developer.

“There is not a set timeline for commissioners to make that decision, but all of the development plans for the projects are going to happen whether the money is there or not. The only differences would be the amounts and how much more affordable the grants funding available.

According to the resolution that created the affordable housing fund, the county commissioners and elected officials that represent at least 70% of the county’s incorporated population have to pass a joint resolution to release funding.

Local real estate agent Marie Lone and Obermueller both reminded the group of citizens filling the board room at the Sheridan County Court House that the goal of the project funds. The funds initiate through liens given to developers to create and sell affordable housing in Sheridan County. When those houses are sold out of the affordable housing purview, those funds are given to the money that is intended to cut down construction costs and eventual- ly buyer costs.

Eagles, Rams look to see who improved most since first meeting

SHERIDAN — The last time Tongue River and Big Horn boys basketball teams met was Jan. 18 in Big Horn.

The Eagles were taking open shots but they could not reach the bottom of the basket. TR failed to make a 3-pointer in the bottom of the basket.

For the Eagles, it was a part of the game of basketball.

The rest of the year, something unusual happened. Mickelson looking for momentum after getting ‘crushed’

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Optimism is never in short supply for Phil Mickelson, and it was especially high when he left the Monterey Peninsula last year with his 44th career PGA Tour victory and his fifth title in the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am.

He had the entire year ahead of him. It didn’t turn out the way he imagined.

“After I won last year, I knew I was going to go out and just crush the rest of the year,” Mickelson said Wednesday. “And the rest of the year crushed me.”

It wasn’t that he failed to win again — no shame in that after turning 49 and competing against an increasingly younger PGA Tour — he only cracked the top 10 one time, at the Masters.

The Presidents Cup, which dates to 1994, was played without him for the first time. And by the end of the year, he was out of the top 50 in the world for the first time in 26 years.

“I didn’t play up to my level of expectation, and it just kind of snowballed and got worse,” Mickelson said.

It was particularly refreshing because Mickelson had missed the cut in Palm Springs and San Diego, the first time in his long career as a pro he had missed the cut in consecutive events to start the year.

“I was really excited about how I was playing. And then I get on the golf course and I start not seeing what I want to happen but more what I don’t want to happen,” Mickelson said. “My inability to kind of control my thoughts was getting the best of me the first few weeks. And I was able to identify the problem and then fix it and start to control my thoughts a little bit better, control my visualization, and I hit a lot of good shots thereafter.”

For everyone, there will be plenty of good visualization this week, with a forecast of sunshine, although temperatures will remain in the 80s. Players will take sun over a few extra layers for warmth rather than a rain suit.

Tokyo tries to quell fear of Olympic-Paralympic cancellation

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo Olympic and Paralympic organizers again tried on Thursday to allay fears that the 2020 Games could be postponed or canceled by the fast-spreading virus from China.

Tokyo Olympic CEO Toshiro Muto, who on Wednesday said he was “seriously worried” the virus could disrupt the Olympic and Paralympics, backtracked a day later and was more cautious in a news conference with officials from the International Paralympic Committee.

“I would like to say that the Olympic and Paralympic Games will be held as scheduled,” Muto said, adding people need to remain “cool headed.”

Craig Spence, the spokesman for the IPC, was even more direct with the Olympics opening in just under six months — and the Paralympics in just under seven.

“One thing I am noticing at the moment is fear is spreading quicker than the virus, and it is important that we quell that fear,” Spence said.

On Thursday, Japan confirmed 45 cases of the virus but no deaths have been reported. Tokyo Olympic officials said they have established a task force to focus on the virus and have been reporting for a week that the games will go ahead as planned.

Iguodala has agreed to a two-year extension with the Heat following his trade from Miami after his long-steady trade.

Iguodala, 34, played only two games last season for Memphis before being traded to Miami. Iguodala is an eight-time All-Star who helped lead the Grizzlies to the Western Conference finals in 2013.

Iguodala is a critical component for Miami, which is looking to add experience to its young core while helping forward Bam Adebayo. Iguodala quadruple figures in nearly every category in his career and his addition helps Miami Heat coach Erik Spoelstra.

ON the course, it’s time for Spieth to hitch up his pants and go.

He has kept a low profile this week, although he is a two-time winner at Pebble Beach who is approaching the one-year anniversary of his last victory, a learning development given a skill set that leads many players to believe he’s still the best in the game.

Also playing is Jordan Spieth, who has been in a spiral since his British Open victory in 2017 to reach the world for the first time since 2015. Johnson is a two-time winner at Pebble Beach who is approaching the one-year anniversary of his last victory, a learning development given a skill set that leads many players to believe he’s still the best in the game.

NICKELSON: Low profile

Three of the more intriguing players in the field all have Sudoku connections — Mickelson, McDowell and Dustin Johnson. Mickelson won the Sudu International by two shots over Johnson, with Mickelson in third. All three flew across 12 time zones to take part in a tournament with heritage and beauty.

“The win last week was important at a lot of venues, just to get me back up in the rankings, get me back in a couple of the WGC events — which is really important — the major championships, and get me back in the right direction again,” Mickelson said. “Ticked a lot of boxes and hopefully I can use it as a springboard to kick on for a big year, big season ahead.”
